

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely Mongolian or Tibetan, arranged in approximately 15 vertical columns from right to left. The script is dense and fluid, with some characters appearing to be ligatures or specific dialectal forms. The text is written on aged, slightly stained paper.

Small handwritten characters or a signature located below the red seal impression in the bottom right corner of the page.